A REIGN OF DISASTERS.

SPAIN AGAIN IN A STATE OF S RIOUS COMPLICATIONS.

His Elderly Daughter, the Princess Doña Isabella, 72 years of age, the only one of the Ruler's children in England—Tory Victorians—Foreign Affairs.

ALFONSO XII, KING OF SPAIN. MADRID, Nov. 26.—(Stratford) by a number of physicians and his weeping wife and children, Alfonso XII, the King of Spain, lay lying on his bed in the palace up to his death long before his approach to the age when most men are in their prime. He was a victim of a long and painful illness, the result of a long and painful illness, the result of a long and painful illness.

He is suffering from several diseases, complicated with consumption. All that medical science can do is being done, but in vain, to save his life. The most eminent doctors who have lately visited him say there is no chance of his "coming around." If he could go to the winter to a milder southern and less rigorous climate than that of Madrid he might be enabled to prolong his life by several months, but as his ministers will not allow the unfortunate ruler to leave the environs of the capital, his dissolution will soon come.

Should he live for a month or two longer, he will have completed the tenth year of his reign. History will have little to say of poor Alfonso XII personally, save that he was a weak and ineffectual monarch. His reign has been an almost constant series of national disasters and humiliations. Spain has in fact gone from bad to worse since Alfonso stepped on the throne.

In the chief diplomatic circles of Europe the question is naturally asked "What will be the result when the royal infant, the infant of the mortal coil? Opinions vary on this head. A diplomatic dignitary who was not allowed to be mentioned but who sympathized with King Alfonso's position, by an enthusiastic character, foretells the immediate establishment of a republic consequent on the king's death.

Queen Christina not having presented her royal spouse with any male issue, King Alfonso leaves no heir to the throne behind him. His eldest daughter, the Princess Doña Isabella, is only three or four years of age, and could, of course, succeed her father after an interregnum of years.

The devoted adherents of the Alfonso family by family are already making their preparations in view of the coming catastrophe. They are determined to proclaim the little princess queen of Spain on the death of Alfonso, and the crown prince, who will nominate Christina the guardian of the young sovereign.

Another aspect of the Alfonso family would be to secure the adhesion of the Carlists to the arrangement by affixing Alfonso's daughter to Don Carlos's eldest son, the Carlist, however, are decidedly averse to such a procedure, for if it were effected young Don Carlos would be only the queen's husband and only in a position analogous to that held by his late French consort of England.

What Don Carlos wants is the crown of Spain. Should he be crowned as the Prince Don Carlos it would be like a monarch of Spain, and it would be the husband of the wife who should be the sovereign. Don Carlos, moreover, is vehemently opposed to a project which would compel him to play the role of a Don Francisco Assisi, the husband of Isabella. Hence the Carlist claim may be regarded as impracticable.

It is thought in many quarters that the republic will be established in Spain, but whether it will be the moderate one of General Canovas or the radical republic of General Sagasta, it is impossible to say.

Alfonso Francisco de Asis de la Concepcion Gregorio, etc., is the eldest son of the late King Alfonso XII, born Nov. 18, 1857. A young man with a Spanish king of 28 years would have had no more than 28 years when he was crowned. He was a child, Spain, under his mother's reign, rose to take rank among the great powers of Europe. Just as the material progress of the country was making his great strides, like a flash a great revolution broke out in 1868, which overthrew the queen, leaving her to die in a little family of five children across to France. In Paris and Vienna Alfonso's studies were prosecuted until 1874, when he entered a military academy in England. In 1870 his mother formally abdicated the throne in his favor. The republic and form of government set up at Madrid under Prim, Canovas and others proved unsatisfactory to the people, so on Dec. 28, 1874, Gen. Canovas proclaimed Alfonso king of Spain. The young king was just then in Paris, paying his mother a Christmas holiday visit. He immediately left and he and his mother and brother returned to Spain. He arrived in Madrid Jan. 14, 1875, and was met enthusiastically received. One year later he took command of the troops operating against the Carlists, and subdued the insurrection within a month. He was now received with a much warmer than his mother thought it safe to return to Spain, but in less than six months he was set for Paris in a post chaise, not on his usual carriage, but on a "wheeler" to the old story. In 1878 Alfonso married his cousin, the Princess Maria Cristina, but she died five months later. At an arduous moment of his widow, he again married, this time Maria Christina, daughter of the late Archduke Charles Ferdinand of Austria, his widow he had two daughters, which would have pleased him more had they been sons. Some time ago the queen paid a visit to the palace for her mother's house in Austria, and the gossip had it that it was owing to the gayness of her husband. At an arduous moment he left her and crossed the border into France, a reconciliation was effected, resulting in Alfonso being made monarch of the kingdom.

THE ELECTIONS. The general result of the elections is slightly in favor of a Conservative reaction, although it affords no certain indication of the ultimate result. At Birmingham there has been a diminution of the Radical strength, except that Mr. Bright's majority over Lord Randolph Churchill is a decided increase. The greatest unaltered Conservative victory is that of Mr. W. H. Smith in the Strand division.

Speaking generally, the figure approximate those of the last election, the Liberal vote summing up less and the Conservative vote more. The result of the election is a surprise. FINDINGS OF THE TARIFF

MR. RANDALL WILL LEAD A MOVEMENT TOWARD REFORM.

Free Traders Should Refuse—By Important to Protectionists—Ground for New Government Buildings—Political—Personal—National Notes.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The fact that Mr. Randall will take a leading part in any effort that may be made toward a reform of the tariff will be a great relief to those timid protectionists who shiver whenever a tariff reform is mentioned. Mr. Randall comes from the very heart of the protected industries, and Pennsylvania ought to feel that the tariff will be a great relief to those timid protectionists who shiver whenever a tariff reform is mentioned.

But they ought to know also that it is useless for them to oppose a tariff reform, when a man like Mr. Randall's unclouded political sagacity sees that some action is unwelcome to the country. The protectionists will also, if they are wise, rejoice to see Mr. Randall, a man familiar with their condition, take hold of the question. It is a guarantee to the tariff that it will be handled from a standpoint friendly and not hostile to them.

If free traders are wise, too, will welcome Mr. Randall and will not limit him in his efforts to reform the tariff. With him in their front they are much less likely to alarm the country and arouse that kind of opposition which comes from mere panic among the protected industries. It was a fortunate circumstance for the free trade cause in England that the Earl of Salisbury, a leading protectionist, became his leader when the time was ripe for legislation; and Mr. Randall in the same sense may hold the place in the house as leader from mere panic among the protected industries.

Another consideration ought to induce sensible protectionists to welcome action on the tariff at this session of congress. The present Congress is to pass a tariff bill. That fact is a guarantee that the present Congress will not make serious or radical changes in the tariff. But it is a guarantee that a certain number of protectionist senators are persuaded that some reform of the present tariff is necessary and demand a very full array of facts upon which they are based. His general belief is known to be that some reduction of duties can be easily made and ought to be made. It will be of great assistance to the intelligent discussion of the question if he shall have been able to prepare a schedule of changes such as upon the information he has obtained cannot fairly be objected to by the protectionists, while they will greatly benefit the country.

The stimulation does not conceal its friendly attitude toward tariff reform, and so about the president in his message will have something to say on the subject. It is not probable that he will present any specific plan. But it is probable that Secretary Manning will present to congress upon it an elaborate and special report upon it, and that he will carry out the present tariff law. The tariff is a subject which has gained much ground in the last few years. It is not probable that he will present any specific plan. But it is probable that Secretary Manning will present to congress upon it an elaborate and special report upon it, and that he will carry out the present tariff law.

It is more of a smuggler's tariff than a protection tariff. Those who believe themselves to need protection ought to be the most earnest to demand of congress its simplification and readjustment.

The branch of the Salvation army which has been sent to Washington for the last three months has pulled up stakes and left the city, having been ordered to Baltimore. Capt. Mary Fielding, who was in command, said before leaving that Washington was about the most unprofitable city in which the army had ever labored, both in a spiritual and financial way. She said the class of people—officials and departmental clerks—that she desired particularly to save had refused to attend the meetings of the army, and that the only attendants were poor wretches and even poorer colored people. She was frank enough to admit that there was not as much wickedness in Washington as the Salvation army had been led to suppose, and that she thought the churches here would be sufficient to look after them.

An ex-chained officer said that the senators and representatives who favor the protection have laid made some investigations into the probable cost of the entire project about fifteen blocks in all, lying between Pennsylvania avenue and the Mall, from the White House grounds to the biological garden, with the view of condemning the property by law out of its purchase by the government, so as to furnish the room now so much demanded for additional buildings for governmental purposes. He said if the project was successful it was the intention to erect the proposed national library building, a new interior department building, the present one being needed by the patent office, and a postoffice department building in the squares to be purchased from the present postoffice building under this plan it is to be used for a city postoffice and the money or better touch of the postoffice department. He said it had been ascertained that the present one being needed by the patent office, and a postoffice department building in the squares to be purchased from the present postoffice building under this plan it is to be used for a city postoffice and the money or better touch of the postoffice department.

Senator Miller, of California, suffered for twelve years from the effect of the wound received during the war, and the pressure of the bill in the region of the brain became unbearable. The operation for its removal was entirely successful, but the effect of the wound on the brain was so great that he had to make a trip to Alaska this summer for the first time, hoping to get some benefit from the pure air. He has been added to rheumatism and gouty troubles, and for weeks his ailments defied medical skill. Recently he thought he was doing better, and he had taken a journey to Washington from San Francisco he heard that he should travel by the southern route, and he was so glad that he had been heard directly from him for some days, and his friends in Washington fear that there has been recurrence of the trouble that made him so invalid during the last summer.

The story is often told visitors here, how the Gilbert Stuart portrait of Washington, in the Green Room, was cut out of its frame by Mr. Madison and taken out in the country for a few days. The portrait of the White House in 1814. According to the legend, Mr. Madison was assisted by a colored servant, who was named "Onion." Every book that has been written about the White House, it is a very pretty one, but the difficulty in its way is that it is not true. Mr. Madison only have saved the portrait, and probably did, but it was never cut out of its frame in the theatrical way that all the world has heard of. Nothing was done to the artist who was employed for many years in looking after, rejuvenating and varnishing the portraits owned by the government, and especially the Gilbert Stuart portrait of Washington, which was cut out of its frame in the theatrical way that all the world has heard of. HON. J. D. KEHOE is announced in the Maysville papers as a candidate for Congress from this district. Mr. Kehoe is a worker in the Democratic ranks, a live and energetic man in everything he undertakes, and will enter the present race with spirit. Two years ago he was one of the competing candidates for the nomination, and was doubtless decidedly in the contest this time.—[Clarke Mercury.]

THE New York Times says: "The war is over. The long and vexatious political struggle that followed it is over. The great body of the Southern people are loyal to the national Government, and have the same rights in it as ourselves, including the right to be trusted when they show themselves trustworthy. Mr. Cleveland would be blind and willful if he did not acknowledge facts which nine-tenths of the American people know to be facts. His work is with the present and for the future, and he is doing with courage, a clear head and a sound heart. It is worse than injustice, it is folly, to deny to him the strength he really shows or to reject the fruits of his fidelity."

Patterns of Perfection.

Some editors in Georgia are patrons of perfection; one of them upon reading about a fashionable northern young lady who was well-dressed, was surprised by the maker in his own way, and suddenly dropped on his knees and thanked his Maker that the maidens of the South have more modesty than to display their underclothing in a store window just previous to marriage.

A Day and Week.

We have had the pleasure of attending many weddings among our circle of acquaintances, but this caps all when we take into consideration the amount of time lost in a few minutes.

"Mildness."

The cable says that "Kinz Thelwa has subverted 10,000 Ducats to cross the frontier and begin plundering. The Ducats are rubbers who work in large gangs and are noted for their bold exploits. Those whom Thelwa has subverted may be very successful robbers, but if he wants the judicial life of rubbers he should send over for a few Pennsylvania protectionists. They never refuse to be subverted."

Regardless of the Heavens.

One of the religious papers, the Chicago Inter-ocean, thinks that the girls play the mischief with theological students. "The young brother, as soon as 'Rev.' is duly honored on before his green name, make a bee line for the girl, and she moves him half way down the lane, and they kiss each other a few times and walk lovingly to some old place, and there they know better, and he puts his hands on their heads and tells them to be good—and so spoils a missionary."

THAT MANDAMUS.

The Clerk's part of Ohio Grants is—For Republican Senates.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 26.—The circuit court has decided the application of the Republican candidates for the state senatorship from Hamilton county for mandamus to County Clerk Dalton, directing him to refuse to count certain election returns which were claimed to show on their face certain evidence of fraud. The application was filed October 23. The court decided to issue the mandamus prayed for, and have directed the county clerk not to count the fraudulent returns. The result is to give certificates of election to all the four Republican candidates for senator.

The public is familiar with the contest for the senatorial certificates claimed by the Republicans on account of fraud.

The court directed Clerk Dalton to credit the candidates as follows:

Harbison	$3.41

The latter raised his arm to protect his head. The keen edge of the knife fell upon his arm, nearly cutting it off. The arteries were divided. Hoffman was conveyed to the hospital where he is said to be lying. Haverham fled but was found and arrested.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 26.—The clergy in this state as a rule refused to read Governor Currier's Thanksgiving proclamation in their churches because it ignored the duty and advised merely "Thanksgiving recollections" without recommending that the people meet in the churches. In some cases President Cleveland's proclamation was substituted.

A NOCTURNAL VISITOR.

Does the Mayville Hog Want the Earth?

Undoubtedly the Mayville hog is the most hogish hog that has been known anywhere. We have been convinced of this fact for a long time, but in no instance has it happened recently in this city that has strengthened our conviction. Not content with having the free use heretofore of the streets, alleys, side-walks, doorways, and with taking possession of the yards, and occasionally the first floors of some of our homes and business houses, they have evidently concluded to extend their domain. They are becoming "high minded" as is often said, and now want to take the second stories, wherever they can get them. We see the junior member of the firm of Vurray & Lee, had for a card on his door, a few days ago that almost convinces us of this fact. His sleeping room is on the second floor of the building occupied by the above firm and Mr. J. Ballenger. His room and the Bulletin office are reached by the same stairway. At a late hour last Sunday evening, the gentleman referred to, as he was entering his room to retire for a night's rest, was somewhat mystified and startled at hearing a grunting, or snoring, in the hall way back of his sleeping quarters. Lighting his lamp, he stepped out to see who or what was making the noise. To his surprise, he found a drunken mortal was who had taken possession for the night. What was his surprise and astonishment, however, to find a big Mayville hog, instead of a poor, unfortunate, drunken mortal. The porker aroused from his slumbers, and frightened at the light, made a dash for the door and came near running Mr. Lee down in the scramble to escape. No damage resulted, however, to Mr. Lee or the hog. But it is intimated that the gentleman's actions in trying to escape from the hall-way and give the animal a free exit, were characterized by more speed than gracefulness. After recovering from his surprise, Mr. Lee retired for the night, but was aroused again between two and three o'clock the next morning by the noise of his hogship nosing about in the hall-way again. He was driven out and the front entrance barred against him. It has been intimated that the hog was looking for Clarence L. Stanton, editor of the paper, to call him to account for the vicious attack waged against his swinehip two years ago. If (the hog) was evidently in earnest about something as it worked its way twice up and down a flight of seven or eight steps.

We have heard of a Mayville hog taking possession of a citizen's parlor and spending an afternoon in a quiet nap under the piano, but this is the first time we have known of a hog going to the paper, to attempt to take possession of a gentleman's sleeping quarters. Evidently, the Mayville hog "wants the earth."

The Western Tobacco Journal has the following of two Mason County citizens in its notes of the Tobacco Shippers' convention held in Cincinnati last week: "Mr. Perry Jefferson was in his element when among the shippers, and to say that he neglected any of them would be doing him an injustice. Perry can say more to the point, and see more men in an hour than the ordinary mortal in a day. He is a 'hustler' and a 'hummer,' and use the popular phrases, and a gentleman whom the shipper and grower delight in meeting. At the big banquet at the Globe House he saw that none were neglected or overlooked in the distribution of 'estables,' 'drinkables' and 'smokeables,' and it wasn't with a grudging hand that the distribution was made, either. Mr. Charles Downing, though not generally spoken of before the convening of the convention as a candidate for Inspector, developed considerable strength and was backed by his county, one of the oldest and largest producers of White Barley. As a shipper and a gentleman he needs no words of commendation. Mason county could not have produced a better candidate, nor could a more efficient gentleman have been placed before the convention."

I turned Tongueless upon myself for facial neuralgia, and it gave immediate relief. I also tried it upon one suffering intense pain from neuralgia of the head; one case gave perfect relief.

A Card.

Editor Bulletin: It is more blessed to give than to receive. This was verified at the Fifth Ward school yesterday, when the children presented their teachers with turkey, oysters, etc. Joy seemed to glow in every countenance. We are a cheerful giver. The children usually remember their teachers. Thanks children.

A Card.

To the Editor of the Bulletin: I ask the privilege of your columns to return my thanks to the members of the congregation of the Central Presbyterian Church for their kindness to myself and family in filling our country in anticipation of Thanksgiving Day. Their generosity and the rare delicacy with which it has been manifested have banished our hearts and prepared us for a happy and longed-for reunion. We are, I hope, the same joy and gratitude may fill the hearts of other people today who will join in the enjoyment of these good gifts. Respectfully yours,

REBECCA, CHEN.

Thanksgiving.

The day of our Thanksgiving night. And scores of Turkey soup must find.

Get one that's young and sweet and fat, And stuff it with the good old sage.

With fruits and herbs, and make a cake, And press it down and bake it.

Ask friends and kindred all to come, And spend the night with you at home.

Let not the car of life divide, But fill each cup with glad surprise.

Revive the joy of youthful days, And for the future make it stay.

—New York Mercury.

Capes with sleeves are seen among short and light frocks for mild days in November and December.

Silk and velvet dresses are coming to the front again as the proper stuffs for toilets for all sorts of occasions.

Silk dresses never go out of fashion. The innovations for their use for certain occasions are only more definite.

Necklaces composed of many strands of large pearls are much worn with low bodices at evening entertainments.

Rough goods fabrics to look well must be lined and faced with silk to match or harmonize with the colors of the wool stuff.
